ABOUT AMBER

Amber Monaco has spent her career diversifying herself. From joining the military to working at the Department of Homeland Security to traveling the world solo, she is an ambitious and natural planner and strategist.

She is self-taught in the world of blogging, digital marketing, and online entrepreneurship. In 2015, Amber quit her government job, sold everything she owned, and traveled the as a digital nomad while running her businesses online. Today, she runs You Need An Amber, dedicated to backend operations.

Amber's past work includes US Navy, Department of Homeland Security, entrepreneurship, podcasting, traveling, and co-launching a fashion technology startup in London. She is a certified Director of Operations and an international speaker. She has lived on 4 continents and has traveled to 40+ countries.

Amber graduated from the University of Maryland and attended The Johns Hopkins University. She lives in Kansas City with her husband, Andrew, his two kids, one cat, chickens, and more tomato plants to feed a small army.
